HONGKONG, THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1894. A LETTER appeared in our columns the other day under the heading. An Officia Joke on Typhcons, commenting upon the remarks of the Officer Administering the Government with reference to what the Hon. Member for the Chamber of Commerce called the late Observatory Commission. Mr Whitehead asked whether the Government had obtained from the members of the late Observatory Commission or from any others interested in the subject, suggestions for the improvement of the with his clever and original Prehistoric system of compiling and issuing meteorological reports, and furnishing weather forecests, and if not, what steps they proposed to take, before the typhcon season is on us, to render the Observatory, in its meteorological branch, more his family. This fact somehow became useful than it has been in the past! known; and next morning the Professor It would possibly be an injustice to Mr entered his class room to the strains of O'Brien to say that, sitting in his place in the Legislative Council, as Acting songs were being sung the Professor stood at his table, quite helpless, for the students Governor, he could indulge in anything like a joke on so serious a subject | died away, be nervously said, I can but as that brought forward by Mr White- bew my schowledgments, and proceeded head, however lightly His Excellency with his lecture. may regard the shipping interests of this colony. This is a matter to which we the Retrenchment Commission give close attention. There would, of course, be strong official opposition to any proposal for the abolition of the Star-Gazing Department' of the Government service; but that is no reason why the Commission should not take into serious consideration the question whether there is not a considerable waste of public money in maintaing the Observatory considering the very poor return which the colony gets for the expenditure involved, an expenditure which the colony has along grudged as being almost, if not entirely, useless.
